GOT A PROPOSAL? TALK TO US

After extensive research and concept trials, we are happy to present, Samvid, a simple and frugal solution which uses a combination of mobile and Bluetooth technologies. Samvid can be labelled with a combination of two parts: a low energy beacon on the bus allowing the bus to indicate its presence and a receiving device, which can interact, when in range and identify the person via audio feedback. The receiving device can either be a phone with the Samvid app running on a custom wearable device. The phone and wearable device would also allow the visually impaired to change the bus number or destination, so that she can be notified when the right bus arrives.

Moreover, Samvid can cater not only to the needs of people with visual impairment but also to the elderly and people unfamiliar with the local language.

Thanks to the constant endorsements of several disability organisations like the Samarthanam Trust for the Disabled, a number of education and livelihood opportunities are opening up for the disabled community. But accessibility issues continue to pose a challenge, and pose a real impediment for people with disabilities, from realising their true potential.

Sahaj adj.

/ Devanagari : सहज /

Meaning: Natural, Simple, Spontaneous

The word Sahaj has its origins in the Sanskrit language and it represents simplicity. Our endeavor is to deliver outcomes which embrace aspects of simplicity represented by elegance, clarity and sophistication. We believe that this cannot happen without a strong commitment to understanding our customer's problems, a solution mindset and a commitment towards engineering excellence. Who's it why we take pride in attracting and hiring people who have empathy curiosity a passion for solving problems, dedication towards their craft, the courage to question the status quo and an eagerness to better the ecosystem around them. We believe that people with these attributes backed up by an organisation with an ecosystem towards creating simple solutions can change the way organizations leverage technology and we are on a journey towards proving just that.

We draw inspiration from the famous quote - Simplicity is the ultimate sophistication. After all, if solutions aren't simple then it only means that we haven't understood the problem well enough. That's a clear signal to 'get back to the basics'.

This is the first section that is visible to the visitor.

Talking about the complex needs having evolved yet simple solutions. Solutions that come from the local innovator. It is not the innovator that matters, he could get lost with time, but it is the simplicity of solutions that sticks through and is eternal.

There are many examples of simple solutions. Keeping the images of those that do not have one particular person or entity attached to it.

I want your *ideas for the next sliders (2). The sliders do no link anywhere for details yet.

The biggest strength of Sahaj is People.

While others may talk about services and products on the first go, we believe that given any problem, of any complexity, given the right people, we can help you come up the simplest solutions possible.

We are defined by who we are as a collective.

Hovering on these will show the title and the linked in link to their profiles. This is stop gap. I do propose that we have a page for each of our employees as well.

'See all of us' links to an internal page, where I will segregate founders and everyone else visually.

'Join us, we're looking' links to the career page with job listings. (internal page)

Our services very briefly talk about the kind of stuff we do.

Should we decide to elaborate with case studies or other content for each one of them, we will subsequently have internal pages that detail them out.

This is followed by a client Testimonial. This is intended to be a video that we have from Elaine Burke(DLO Haiti). While I edit and make it Sahaj ready, we will go with text at the moment.

Below that 'Got a proposal? talk to us' invites a conversation from the visitor should she have an interesting proposal for us.

4

We have a product today. Should be showcased here. We will make this into a carousel as we have more such products.

Visitors can download brochure(pdf) or Audio in the this case talking about the product(mp3 file)

'Got a proposal? Talk to us' still appears here to allow visitors with potentially good ideas to initiate a communication with us.

Great articles that we have them on our personal blogs could be available on the website for people to read as well.

Blogs invite people to share ideas with the outer world. Its a credibility booster when we talk about Sahaj being all about the people who work here.

Each of these posts/articles will have a detailed inner page, where the articles can be shared on social media too.

'View all blogs' will have a inner listing page with all the available blogs.

Do we need a pocket for New and Media(Sahaj in the news) as well?
